

Colors, Shapes and Textures

Autumn

bill deuster

When we explore and observe our autumn surroundings, we find an endless display of information - colors, shapes and textures - that are instructive, even inspirational.

Autumn is a season of glorious decay,
followed by patient dormancy.

This process reveals beautiful
colors, shapes and textures.

Selected randomly,
diverse elements fall
together to percolate
in unpredictable ways.

We often gaze upward
to the sky. Perhaps, in autumn, we should look to our feet.

Autumn reveals a bold, colorful display destined to enrich our experience.

As autumn exhales into winter, a colder landscape offers a frozen, muted image of Beauty.

A leaf lands in a random place. It cannot pick its neighbors.

Normally blended together, autumn isolates neighbors that are camouflaged in spring and summer.

And, sometimes, the leaves land together.
